Mary Shelley Makes a Monster
Conversation Pieces

A Small Paperback Series from Aqueduct Press
Subscriptions available: www.aqueductpress.com

1. The Grand Conversation
   Essays by L. Timmel Duchamp
2. With Her Body
   Short Fiction by Nicola Griffith
3. Changeling
   A Novella by Nancy Jane Moore
4. Counting on Wildflowers
   An Entanglement by Kim Antieau
5. The Traveling Tide
   Short Fiction by Rosaleen Love
6. The Adventures of the Faithful Counselor
   A Narrative Poem by Anne Sheldon
7. Ordinary People
   A Collection by Eleanor Arnason
8. Writing the Other A Practical Approach
   by Nisi Shawl & Cynthia Ward
9. Alien Bootlegger
   A Novella by Rebecca Ore
10. The Red Rose Rages (Bleeding)
    A Short Novel by L. Timmel Duchamp
11. Talking Back: Epistolary Fantasies edited by L. Timmel Duchamp
12. Absolute Uncertainty
    Short Fiction by Lucy Sussex
13. Candle in a Bottle
    A Novella by Carolyn Ives Gilman
14. Knots
    Short Fiction by Wendy Walker
15. Naomi Mitchison: A Profile of Her Life and Work
   A Monograph by Lesley A. Hall

16. We, Robots
   A Novella by Sue Lange

17. Making Love in Madrid
   A Novella by Kimberly Todd Wade

18. Of Love and Other Monsters
   A Novella by Vandana Singh

19. Aliens of the Heart
   Short Fiction by Carolyn Ives Gilman

20. Voices From Fairyland:
   The Fantastical Poems of Mary Coleridge, Charlotte Mew, and Sylvia Townsend Warner
   Edited and With Poems by Theodora Goss

21. My Death
   A Novella by Lisa Tuttle

22. De Secretis Mulierum
   A Novella by L. Timmel Duchamp

23. Distances
   A Novella by Vandana Singh

24. Three Observations and a Dialogue:
   Round and About SF
   Essays by Sylvia Kelso and a correspondence with Lois McMaster Bujold

25. The Buonarotti Quartet
   Short Fiction by Gwyneth Jones

26. Slightly Behind and to the Left Four Stories & Three Drabbles by Claire Light

27. Through the Drowsy Dark Short Fiction and Poetry
   by Rachel Swirsky

28. Shotgun Lullabies
   Stories and Poems by Sheree Renée Thomas

29. A Brood of Foxes
   A Novella by Kristin Livdahl

30. The Bone Spindle
   Poems and Short Fiction by Anne Sheldon
31. The Last Letter
   A Novella by Fiona Lehn

32. We Wuz Pushed
   On Joanna Russ and Radical Truth-Telling
   by Brit Mandelo

33. The Receptionist and Other Tales
   Poems by Lesley Wheeler

34. Birds and Birthdays
   Stories by Christopher Barzak

35. The Queen, the Cambion, and Seven Others
   Stories by Richard Bowes

36. Spring in Geneva
   A Novella by Sylvia Kelso

37. The XY Conspiracy
   A Novella by Lori Selke

38. Numa
   An Epic Poem
   by Katrinka Moore

39. Myths, Metaphors, and Science Fiction:
   Ancient Roots of the Literature of the Future
   Essays by Sheila Finch

40. NoFood
   Short Fiction by Sarah Tolmie

41. The Haunted Girl
   Poems and Short Stories by Lisa M. Bradley

42. Three Songs for Roxy
   A Novella by Caren Gussoff

43. Ghost Signs
   Poems and a Short Story by Sonya Taaffe

44. The Prince of the Aquamarines & The Invisible Prince: Two Fairy Tales by Louise Cavelier Levesque

45. Back, Belly, and Side: True Lies and False Tales
   Short Fiction by Celeste Rita Baker

46. A Day in Deep Freeze
   A Novella by Lisa Shapter

47. A Field Guide to the Spirits
   Poems by Jean LeBlanc
48. Marginalia to Stone Bird
   Poems by Rose Lemberg
49. Unpronounceable
   A Novella by Susan diRende
50. Sleeping Under the Tree of Life
   Poetry and Short Fiction by Sheree Renée Thomas
51. Other Places
   Short Fiction by Karen Heuler
52. Monteverde: Memoirs of an Interstellar Linguist
   A Novella by Lola Robles, translated by Lawrence Schimel
53. The Adventure of the Incognita Countess
   A Novella by Cynthia Ward
54. Boundaries, Border Crossings, and Reinventing the Future
   Essays and Short Fiction by Beth Plutchak
55. Liberating the Astronauts
   Poems by Christina Rau
56. In Search of Lost Time
   A Novella by Karen Heuler
57. Cosmovore
   Poems by Kristi Carter
58. Helen’s Story
   A Novella by Rosanne Rabinowitz
59. Liminal Spaces
   Short Fiction by Beth Plutchak
60. Feed Me the Bones of Our Saints
   Short Fiction by Alex Dally MacFarlane
61. If Not Skin: Collected Transformations
   Poems and Short Fiction by Toby MacNutt
62. The Adventure of the Dux Bellorum
   A Novella by Cynthia Ward
63. People Change
   Short Fiction and Poems by Gwynne Garfinkle
64. Invocabulary
   Poems by Gemma Files
65. The Green and Growing
   A Novella by Erin K. Wagner
66. Everything is Made of Letters
   Short Fiction by Sofía Rhei

67. Midnight at the Organporium
   Short Fiction by Tara Campbell

68. Algorithmic Shapeshifting
   Poems by Bogi Takács

69. The Rampant
    A Novella by Julie C. Day

70. Mary Shelley Makes a Monster
    Poems by Octavía Cade

71. Articulation
    Shot Plays by Cesi Davidson

72. City of a Thousand Feelings
    A Novella by Anya Johanna DeNiro

73. Ancient Songs of Us
    Poems by Jean LeBlanc

74. The Adventure of the Naked Guide
    A Novella by Cynthia Ward
The feminist engaged with sf is passionately interested in challenging the way things are, passionately determined to understand how everything works. It is my constant sense of our feminist-sf present as a grand conversation that enables me to trace its existence into the past and from there see its trajectory extending into our future. A genealogy for feminist sf would not constitute a chart depicting direct lineages but would offer us an ever-shifting, fluid mosaic, the individual tiles of which we will probably only ever partially access. What could be more in the spirit of feminist sf than to conceptualize a genealogy that explicitly manifests our own communities across not only space but also time?

Aqueduct’s small paperback series, Conversation Pieces, aims to both document and facilitate the “grand conversation.” The Conversation Pieces series presents a wide variety of texts, including short fiction (which may not always be sf and may not necessarily even be feminist), essays, speeches, manifestoes, poetry, interviews, correspondence, and group discussions. Many of the texts are reprinted material, but some are new. The grand conversation reaches at least as far back as Mary Shelley and extends, in our speculations and visions, into the continually created future. In Jonathan Goldberg’s words, “To look forward to the history that will be, one must look at and retell the history that has been told.” And that is what Conversation Pieces is all about.

L. Timmel Duchamp

Mary Shelley Makes a Monster

by

Octavia Cade
Contents

Mary Shelley:
MARY SHELLEY MAKES A MONSTER .................. 1

Katherine Mansfield:
THE MONSTER AND THE DOLLHOUSE .......... 13

Virginia Woolf:
THE MONSTER AND THE LIGHTHOUSE ........ 25

Janet Frame:
THE MONSTER AND THE ANGEL .................. 35

Sylvia Plath:
THE MONSTER AND THE BELL JAR .......... 45

Grace Mera Molisa:
THE MONSTER AND THE BLACK STONE .... 53

Octavia Butler:
THE MONSTER AND THE KINDRED .......... 61

Angela Carter:
THE MONSTER AND THE WOLF ............. 69

Murasaki Shikibu:
THE MONSTER AND MURASAKI ............. 81
Mary Shelley:
MARY SHELLEY
MAKES A MONSTER
The monster has no heart.

Mary has two.
There is the one she keeps in her bureau—wrapped up in silk and parchment, burnt about the edges and stinking of salt.

It is the heart of the man who was her lover and it is less damaged than the heart inside her chest. That is a mangled and un-pretty thing, but she takes it out of her chest sits it beside the other:

two hearts on a writing desk.
The vibrations send the papers flying.

The hearts are both shriveled and blackening, but hers is about to bite and his just slumps there, as though all its work was done in drowning. There is no question which is the stronger.

Mary takes her own strong heart and puts it back into the cavity behind her ribs. The monster has to be loved, and with that leaking scrap sitting in a silver box inside the monster’s chest she will be able to love it.

(If she gave it her own heart it would rip her to pieces.)
Octavia Cade

(If she took his heart for her own, grief would catch at her like undertow, yank her down into deep water.)
The monster has no foresight.

Mary doesn’t have much either, but the monster is one of her creations and she would like to do better for it than herself.

She smashes a glass and collects the fragments, picks shards out of her palms until they’re wet with blood, and then she shapes the little pieces, paints them with red and silver on one side only and she has her mirrors.

These she pastes to the monster’s fingers for nails so that it can see its face (when it has a face) in everything as it creates. But the monster is a baby still and sucks its fists, buries its thumbs in the blank crevasse of mouth, and all the nails come off.

Mary breaks more glasses, paints more mirrors, and this time before she pastes them she doesn’t round off the edges.

When the monster sucks its thumbs its blood runs black as engine oil. It learns not to suck anymore.

Mary’s face is reflected ten times, and harshly.
The monster has no history.

Mary papers the inside of its skull with dreams of her mother, with vindications of a life that she herself cut short. She impregnates it with rights, and the monster comes to believe that it has them.

Of course you do, says Mary— but when it comes time to take the monster out (to display it) she pretends it has been made by somebody else, lets it stumble about blindly searching for the mother that abandoned it until everyone has gone home and she is left with the reminders of her imperfections.

You are just a copy, she says, mocking. Poor copy.
The monster has no will.

Mary fills it with mice.
She can hear the squeaks, and the monster vibrates with their movement, with the scampering under skin and the appearance of vitality.

The little bodies run through hollow bones and get lost there.

They die one by one.
Nothing Mary does can keep them alive.

(The monster scratches at itself with mirrored fingers until it finds mouse tails and pulls the bodies free, buries them quietly in unmarked graves.)
The monster has no children.

Mary has had four children, and her life ends with theirs. She takes pieces of them (locks of hair and teeth and little balls) sews them up nicely and makes the monster watch as she scrapes away its genitals, leaves it smooth and mute below the waist because if there are no grandchildren for her there will be none for it either.

She gouges out its abdomen and leaves the little sewed sack there, packs it in with clay and surrounds it with batteries so that the whole will light up with interference and with absence.
The monster has no face.

It is bald as eggs.
When Mary sings to it there is no ripple of response and no expression in it.

The face she would like best for it has been eaten off by fishes and burnt in iron.
She could recreate it, she thinks, in parts—but she has already used those parts, and for others.

She did not think ahead, and all her mirrors are broken.

Mary writes a face upon the monster instead, substitutes words for flesh.
She puts Arctic in the eye-sockets and Alps along the cheekbones.
She writes Geneva on its forehead, and the lips are made from electricity and the death of young women.

The pressure of the quill leaves scars that ink and imagination will not cover up, and when the monster opens cold white eyes to see the poor reflection of its face it finds little comfort there.
The comfort is in Mary’s face:
the face of vanished bloodlines and children who murder their mothers at birth.

These are things that will be familiar, thinks the monster.
In its chest, the little salt heart remembers what it was like to love.

(The monster sees Mary’s face, and covets.)
Mary Shelley Makes a Monster

7

The monster takes Mary’s face and wears it.
The monster takes Mary’s womb and bears it.
The monster takes Mary’s will and buries it.
The monster takes Mary’s past and carries it.
The monster takes Mary’s future and meets it.
The monster takes Mary’s heart and eats it.
Welcome home, heart, it says.
You should not have locked yourself so far away.
When it goes out into the world, no one can tell the difference.